

Douglas Gorton

Douglas Gorton has presented widely on technology-assisted learning in local, national, and international venues. On the local level he has presented for countless school district in-service days, community days, local businesses, organizations, as well as onsite demonstrations and videoconferencing talks to universities. Nationally, Douglas has presented at the IBM Executive Conference Center in Palisades, NY, at the Association for Computing Machinery's ACM conference in San Jose, CA, at the Secretary of Education's Conference on Educational Technology in Washington DC, at appeared before the Congressional Commission on Web-based Learning as an expert witness. Douglas was also invited to attend Conference 2000 in Singapore to present on technology-assisted learning and related projects. Douglas was president of his high school's chapter of the American Technology Honor Society, as well as led a student-run service project which endeavored to teach local senior citizens how to use computers and the Internet. Douglas is a graduate of Hunterdon Central Regional High School in Flemington, NJ, and was a member of the school's National Honor Society chapter. There, he was the Editor-in-chief of the school's award winning online literary magazine, Electric Soup.

Douglas is a sophomore at Virginia Polytechnic Institute and State University in Blacksburg, Virginia, USA, where he majors in Computer Science. He is Production Manager of the university's online literary magazine, Silhouette. He is the Undergraduate Programming Committee Representative for the Virginia Tech chapter of the Association for Computing Machinery. Douglas is currently a member of Phi Sigma Theta National Honor Society as well as the National Society of Collegiate Scholars.

Douglas has coauthored two sidebars for the nationally distributed Technology and Learning Magazine. Countless pieces of his poetry and prose have been published in his high school's online literary magazine, as well as have his poem "Millenium's Dawn" published on the Singapore Ministry of Education's Website. He is a GKE intern.