

JIANWEI CAO

Jianwei Cao is the COO of the GKE Beijing 2 facility that launched in 2003 in offices adjacent to the Peking University campus. That facility manages the GKE Global Innovation Center in Beijing, the GKE Membership Alliance Services in China, and a partnership relationship with ASPU, the Allied Schools of Peking University, most especially Peking University's prestigious, Allied Elementary School.

Jianwei Cao has extensive experience in China's business and financial industries. In the early 1990's, Jianwei Cao set up Tianlong Share Holding Company (TSHC) that was included in the first group of companies that listed on China's stock exchange. He served as TSHC's Director of the Board. He handled TSHC investments, the set up of the Import and Export Division of TSHC, the set of TSHC's Shenzhen Branch, and its acquisition of the Tianwanese-invested Zhida Chemical Co.

In the late 1990's Jianwei set up the investment banking company, Tsinghua Unisplendor Investing Consulting Company, that was among the first group of China's approved consulting companies permitted to deal with securities. He acquired a stock-listed company in Shenyang and served as its CFO.

Jianwei Cao has focused on the education industry since 1998. In cooperation with Peking University, he set up the Peking University Education Investment Company and the Xue Yuan Education Investment Company and served as CFO. He handled the investing, management, and authorization of a primary, secondary, and university institutional network that eventually supplied services to 500 allied net-schools.

Jianwei Cao holds an ME in Chemistry Engineering from Peking University and has served as a Researcher with the China Institute of Printing Science and Technology. Early in his career, Jianwei Cao set up the financial and business operations of Beijing Longhua Industrial Company and Beijing Tianlong Biochemical Research Institute.